After the reading of the Valedictory, which was an elegant production, and read with good taste and indgment, diplomas were conferred upon the graduating class, comprising some thirty-nine young ladies, viz: those who read essays during the Exhibition. Thus closed the forty-second commencement of this "time honored" Institution. The attendence throughout was large; immense, we might say Monday and Tuesday nights. On the latter evening, the large chapel was crowded to excess, and many stood out-of-doors, at the windows and door ways, whilst hundreds went away. Verily, if Mr. Elliorr increases the attractions of his annual exhibitions much more, he will be compelled to double the capacity of the chapel, or he cannot begin to accommodate his friends. It gives us great pleasure to know that whilst the Academy does not abate in popularity, its progress in true merit, as ev denced in the scholarship of the pupils, is steady and sure. Most fervently do we wish the Institution a thousand returns of commencement day.

Explosion of the Penusylvania. We copy the following from the Memphis Eagle and Enquirer of yesterday:

We have to record at the present time, proand loss of life that ever occurred upon the Mississippi. The fine steamer Penn-ylvania. commanded by Capt. Kleintelter, and plying between St. Louis and New Orleans, as she was nearing the lower point of Berd aw Is-land, seventy miles below this city, Sinday morning last, exploded two of her boilers, blowing the entire front portion of the boat, together with about two hundred of h r passengers both deck and cabin bundreds of feet into the air. Many of them were asteep in their berths at the time, and were hurried. unawakened, into eternity. Captain Kleinfelter happened to be in the barber-shop at the moment, and thereby escaped. As soon as possible, he ordered the anchor to be cast, but the line soon snapped, and the boat taking fire, floated on down. A woodboat was hailed; the owner, Mr. Harrison, came to the immediate rescue; the dead, dying and wounded, and living, were put on the wood boat, save a few who could not be taken off before the wreck took fire. At one time the wood boat adhered to the wreck, and apprehension was felt as to the prospect of WE are offering a fine Trotter and an open Buggy, some two hundred being burned up. Owing, for cash only. however, to the energy and decision of purpose of a few noble and during spirits, the wood boat, after being separated, was drawn over to Ship and Battle Island, where the witnessed the wreck burn up below them, in a space of about ten minutes, and where they remained until about I o'clock, when the steamer Imperial, bound for New Orleans, was bailed, and towed the wood-boat down to

A large number of the passengers, both of the wounded and unburt, remained upon the bank, near the scene, patil 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Kate Frisbee came up, took them on board and brought them to Memphis. Four died on the Frisbee while coming up-James Dorris, chief engineer; Father Delicrop, New Orleans; N. Bautscher, New Orleans; John Bautscher, New Orleans. The steamer Diaga, which also came to the place of accident, did her part nobly. The exact cause of this heart-rending accident, cannot be ascertained. We had an interview with Mr. Dorris, surviving brother of SNYDER & FRIZZELL. the chief engineer, who was on watch at the time, and received his own statement, which we have no reason to doubt. He says he tested the boilers a few minutes before the explosion, and found them apparently to contain the proper quantity of water. They only had on between 130 and 135 pounds of steam, while her charter permits 140. They were not firing up at the moment, but on the contrary, were cleaning the coals out of the furnaces. Her macidnery was some seven years old, which, most likely, was the cause of her bursting. While talking to Mr. Dorris, we observed the plain print of a human hand, in blood, upon one of his shoulders. It was his brother's, who then lay a corpse near by. Both of them owned an interest in the Penu-

although egold at

island to gather the bodies and whatever els

he could from the wreck.

Thirty of the wounded and scalded now lie in the large court room of the Exchange Buildings, which, for the present, has been converted into a hospital. Two of them have died since—the little German boy, Betz, and a man, name unknown. Some ten or twelve more will probably die; indeed, they are almost past hope of recovery.

Some 15 or 20 mere of the wounded are at the Gayoso-three of them died there yesterday-a young Frenchman named Emanuel de Generes, the basso of the New Orleans French Opera troupe, named Rauch, and another, whose name we could not learn. Two of the the number left by the Diana on the wharfboat died there yesterday morning. Every P. M. hotel in the city contains several of these unfortunate beings, and the hospital has received all it can accommodate. The number of souls on the Pennsylvania has been differently estimated-some think there were as many as 400, others 500.

Judge Wm. R. Harris, of this city, and brother of the present Governor, who was severely scalded and otherwise hurt, is not expected to survive, as we learned late last evening. He is one of the Supreme Judges of this State.
